INTRODUCTION

Genesis of the project

Since the very beginning of the twentieth century, a composite of various Amazigh lexicographical works, which happen to be of paramount importance in the Amazigh literature, have been carried out by a number of researchers. Interestingly, these works have borne heavily on single dialects without approaching Amazigh as a whole. Of prime importance within these works, we may well mention the two works labeled Dictionnaire berbère-français by (Jordan, 1934) and Vocabulaire français-berbère by (Destaing, 1938), which draw on the Tashlhit of Sous. There are many other dictionaries which have drawn on other Amazigh varieties, works such as Dictionnaire espagnol-baamrani (Ifni dialect) by (Ibaňez, 1954), Dictionnaire rifain-espagnol by (Ibaňez, 1949), Dictionnaire touareg-français (dialecte de l'Ahggar) by (De Foucauld, 1951) in four volumes, Lexique fançais-touareg (dialecte de l'Ahggar) by (Cortade,1967), Dictionnaire kabyle-français by (Dallet, 1982), Dictionnaire français-kabyle by (Dallet, 1985), Dictionnaire mozabite-français by (Delheure, 1984) and Dictionnaire ouargli-français by (Delheure, 1987). Over the last few decades, a number of dictionaries have been carried out for academic ends (doctoral dissertations). This is the case of Dictionnaire Tamazight-français by (Taifi, 1992), Dictionnaire tarifit-français by (Serhoual, 2002), Dictionnaire berbère-français by (Azdoud, 2011) and Dictionnaire amazighe-français by (Oussikoum, 2013). The first decade of 2000 has also known the appearance of Dictionnaire touareg-français (Niger) by (Prasse, Alojaly and Ghabdouane, 2003) along with Dictionnaire zénaga-français by (Taine-Cheikh, 2008) and Dictionnaire français-zénaga by (Taine-Cheikh, 2010).

The most common attribute that all the afore-mentioned works share is the fact that they are bilingual: Amazigh-French or French-Amazigh (less so Amazigh-Spanish or Spanish-Amazigh). M. Chafik's Dictionnaire arabe-amazighe (in three volumes, 1990, 1996, 2000), stands in a tangential position with respect to the line of thinking adopted in the dictionaries set out previously, owing to his interest in Amazigh as a common language by including a whole range of Amazigh varieties in his dictionary. With all the afore-mentioned dictionaries in mind, we may well contend that the lexicon of the majority of Amazigh lects is, thus far, well covered. Nonetheless, no monolingual Amazigh-Amazigh dictionary has been carried out so far. Some tentatives are indeed observed (cf. Haddachi, 2000), but remain timid due to the lack of a metalanguage.

There is no doubt that a dictionary derives much of its importance and usefulness from its use as a work of reference. In fact, the mere existence of a word in a dictionary nomenclature is translated in the eyes of the user as a word that has ‘legal’ existence. More often than not, when a user is suspicious about a lexical item which they deem unusual, they refer to the dictionary to invalidate the word in question. Dictionaries, accordingly, may well be viewed to have an undeniable importance, most influentially, in language teaching-learning processes. With the reasons laid out above, The Royal Institute of Amazigh Culture (IRCAM) has considered it of paramount importance to compile a general dictionary for the Amazigh language. However, the translation of the project into action has been postponed on many an occasion because the priority has been given to other domains of no less strategic importance, namely the graphic codification of Amazigh and the preparation of sectorial glossaries (grammar, media, administration) required by teachers, journalists and different cultural producers.

With the recognition of Amazigh as an official language in 2011, the undertaking of a lexicographical tool encompassing the different Amazigh varieties in Morocco has become essentially necessitated, not only by functional and practical reasons but also by social motives. The Language Planning Centre (Centre d’Aménagement Linguistique - CAL) of IRCAM, whose central thrust is to get around Amazigh language issues, has decided to elaborate a reference lexicographical tool for Moroccans in its action plan. The team involved in the carrying out of this work have aspired to create a dictionary in proper form by providing exhaustive definitions and illustrations of use. However, since the Amazigh language is still under the process of morphological and syntactic standardization, the idea has been postponed and the work centered on the following objectives:

(i) Compile the lexical material existing in the different lexicographical documents;

(ii) constitute a primary nomenclature;

(iii) enrich it along the course of developing terminological work in the Language Planning Centre;

(iv) describe it by providing elementary morpho-syntactic information for each entry and stock the data.

The choice of Amazigh as a source language in the dictionary, both in its original form Dictionnaire général de la langue amazighe (Amazigh-French-Arabic)[1] or in this translated version (Amazigh-English), is ascribed to a whole range of reasons. Foremost among these reasons is the fact that the neology dynamism that the Amazigh language has known drives the authors to adopt a semasiological perspective where meaning

1. This version of the dictionary The General Dictionary of the Amazigh Language is a translation of the Dictionnaire général de la langue amazighe published in 2017 by Ameur et al.

follows the lexical entry. With the target language being English, this work is meant to be a continuation of the previous version of the dictionary where the correspondents of the Amazigh entries are provided in Arabic and French, in fine accord with the sociolinguistic situation in Morocco, where Arabic and Amazigh cohabit as official languages and French as the first foreign language. This English version is meant to widen the scope of access to Amazigh lexical material by targeting Amazigh or non-Amazigh users who master English to the exclusion of other languages.

It is worth to say that in this work, which goes by the name The General Dictionary of the Amazigh Language[2], the term dictionary is construed in its broader etymological meaning as a collection of words. Put in another way, the vocabulary comprised in the dictionary may well be viewed as part of a larger lexicon that no dictionary, no matter how exhaustive it is, may cover.

It is a categorical reality that elaborating a dictionary is not necessary unless it fares better than earlier dictionaries at the lexical level. This dictionary outstands earlier dictionaries by compiling a whole range of lexical items belonging to many Amazigh varieties, thereby, assembling what has been scattered on a composite of various dictionaries. More often than not, dialectal information is eschewed because the team has considered it of prime importance to collect the existing lexical material without caring much for its dialectal origin[3]. The central thrust behind this choice is the fact that the work is, in large measure, driven by the tenets of language planning and is meant to be a standard Amazigh dictionary for all Moroccans. Conducting such work under a language planning perspective subsumes a good amount of work whose central objective is to bring together the different lects and to try to achieve phonetic, and sometimes even morphological, harmony. As the reader may verify, many amendments, driven by phonetic harmonization, are observed on spirants as well as on some labiovelars and affricates[4].

2. This work could not have seen light without the help of a number of people. Particularly, I would like to thank Hassan Ansar for helping in the generation of the Word version of this dictionary and the resolution of many technical problems. My thanks are also due to Karim Bensoukas for having accepted to do the reading and editing of the introduction of this dictionary.

3. The team is well aware that this option runs counter to the expectations of a descriptive linguist whose central thrust is to describe linguistic facts and localize them geographically. Nonetheless, it is our hope that linguists understand the approach adopted in the compiling of this dictionary; this approach is meant to reconstruct the puzzle of the Amazigh language that has been subject to profound fragmentation.

4. The word [idji], for instance, will surfaces as a variant of illi ‘my daughter’. Interdialectal comparison shows that the affricate [dj] is but a surface realization of /ll/ in some regions. From a notational standpoint, the transcription adopted in this dictionary is IPA. There are, nonetheless, some exceptions which may be laid out as follows: /e/ stands for /∂/, /c/ for / ʃ/, /y/ for /j/ and /j/ for /ʒ /. Emphatic segments are marked by a dot on the underneath of the character.

This work derives much of its appeal also from the inclusion of neologisms. The created words, which are indicated by the label neo. are of paramount importance in the sense that they are a noteworthy facet that exhibits the evolution and vitality of the language. Word creation is not the only fashion in which neologism is observed. Often, only one of the meanings of a lexical unit that already obtains in the language is neological. When such display holds, the neological meaning is indicated as well by the label neo. The reader may well observe that an important part is assigned to terminology, and that common lexical items are observed side by side with specialized terminology. Borrowings, of important derivational productivity, social legitimacy and geographical extension readily have a place in the dictionary if no rivaling native lexeme holds in the language. Interestingly, the dictionary which is meant for a large public, comprises, along with the entries transcribed in the Tifinaghe-IRCAM writing system, their correspondents in amended International Phonetic Alphabet. With the display as such, the dictionary may well contribute into the accessibility of the nomenclature to a larger public, most notably to those who are not initiated to the Tifinaghe writing system. The coexistence of the two transcriptions will further facilitate the learning of the Tifinaghe writing system owing to the phenomenon of correspondence observed between IPA and Tifinaghe characters.

Objective

Carrying out a dictionary on the basis of the Amazigh varieties observed in Morocco may well contribute into compiling the lexical material of the whole range of Amazigh varieties in a single volume as undertaken in a thesaurus. This work is not only meant to avail users of a lexicographical tool but also to contribute to the promotion of lexicographical research in the field of Amazigh linguistics, by providing huge lexical material that can be addressed both in morphological and lexico-semantic studies. Furthermore, this work is also construed to accompany the integration of Amazigh in the different cycles of teaching and in the various sectors of life, given the changes observed in the Moroccan sociolinguistic profile.

Methodology

Any elaboration of a dictionary amounts to an imperative that the lexicographer should, by right, take into consideration a composite of various choices, not only with respect to the public targeted but also with regard to the functions the dictionary is meant to attain. The headword, or more concretely the form chosen to be an entry, is the aorist form of the verb in the verbal category and the unmarked form of the noun (singular, free state) in the nominal category except if the noun obtains only in the plural form, in which case the plural form is supplied. As for derived forms, they never hold as entries.

The feminine form is readily derived from the masculine form by adjoining the feminine affixal morpheme to the masculine form. Sporadic exceptions may well be observed when the noun is attested only in the feminine form, as is the case in ⵜⴰⴷⴳⴳⵯⴰⵜ [tadggʷat] or ⵜⴰⵎⴷⴷⵉⵜ [tamddit] ‘afternoon’. Under the verb category, a whole range of important subtleties deserve mention. The derived form is not supplied unless its meaning abstracts away from the meaning of the verb in its simple form. This is the case of verb ⵎⵓⵏ [mun] ‘accompany’, whose derived form ⵙⵎⵓⵏ [smun] means not only ‘get to accompany’ but also ‘gather, assemble’. Derived verbs, in the causative, reciprocal or passive form, foil the attempt to surface as entries unless they are tangential, meaning-wise, at least to one of the meanings of their corresponding simple form.

From a theoretical standpoint, an approach whose central thrust is to integrate various Amazigh varieties has been, deliberately, adopted. All the lexical units of the language have been accommodated, major lexical units (verbs, nouns, adjectives, adverbs and prepositions) as well as grammatical units. Dialectal variation is construed as an enrichment; the variants of an entry are, thereby, offered if they exist. Conversely, variants, frequently, fail to surface as lexical entries; only the basic form is offered. Driven by didactic ends, the team may, sporadically, assign the status of full lexical entries to variants. More specifically, when a scenario holds where a variant substantially departs phonetically or morphologically from its basic form, it surfaces as an entry among the other lexical items surfacing as entries. This choice, which stands in fundamental conflict with the basic principle of entry selection, derives much of its appeal and usefulness from the fact that it enables uninformed readers to find the target lexical item irrespective of their ignorance of the phonetic and morphological transformations that brought about the variant form from the basic form. Nonetheless, even in such a scenario, the other variants are offered.

Furthermore, the whole range of meanings that a lexical entry has, as the reader may observe, are yielded. The different meanings are hierarchically supplied starting by the first basic meaning all the way to less basic, usually more semantically extended, meanings. The different meanings are preceded by the numbers (1, 2, 3, 4, 5) depending on the number of meanings the entry has.

An important point that deserves mention is the fact that the authors have adopted a normative approach in selecting lexical material, which means that phonetic realizations are not always taken without modification. The core graphic and linguistic norms of standard Amazigh are respected in the course of accommodating lexical entries. The central goal is to ease implantation and pave the way to the diffusion of the standard Amazigh writing norm. With an eye to contributing to the lexical enrichment of the language, some lexical units that have been recently created and relatively used are also integrated.

Of paramount importance among the goals mean to be achieved by this dictionary is to compile the lexical material and foil the loss of attested terms which are not used on a regular basis; some of these terms which belong to the fauna and flora domains have been retained though it was difficult to provide their English correspondents in an exact way. On many an occasion, the authors, while providing the correspondents to the Amazigh entries, have used 'plant variety' or 'bird species' as corresponding expressions to some entries although the expressions lack precision. If the proposed equivalents are far from being satisfactory to the lexicographer, they, at least, have the merit of preserving the entry, which, in a future work, will be the point of departure for the creation of a more extensive dictionary. In fact, the lack of precision in the definition of some fauna and flora lexical entries is not an oddity of this dictionary but pervades even the most comprehensive works, such as Mots et choses berbères by Emile Laoust (1920).

Classification

In Amazigh lexicography, two prime approaches stand in a tangential relationship to each other. The first is organizing entries along root constituency while the second is organizing entries along alphabetical order. Each of the approaches has its own adepts and detractors. The arguments advanced center, most influentially, on the grouping or ungrouping of derivational paradigms. In the current work, which is intended not only for the specialized linguist but also for the public, the adopted order is alphabetical. The choice derives much of its appeal from the ability of the user to undertake an easy consultation of the target words without having to know the linguistic structure or the spelling of the words.

The nomenclature of the dictionary comprises 13674 entries organized in two columns along the following microstructure.

Microstructure

The whole array of information provided for each lexical entry is meant not only to provide information on the meaning of the word but also to supply information on its use. In the absence of lexical illustrations, we shall, whenever necessary, provide the valency of verbs or the preposition that collocates with the verb when the meaning requires such collocation.

In microstructure terms, the following indications shall be provided respectively.

- The entry word, in blue, transcribed in the Tifinaghe writing system and preposed by a number;
- The amended IPA transcription of the entry word between two square brackets;
- The phonetic and morphological variants of the entry word, when they are attested, preposed by the label var.;
- Morphology (inflexion): concerning the nominal category, both the construct state and the plural form are supplied, as for the verbal category, the different themes (preterite, negative preterite and intensive) are provided;
- The equivalent in English (with the various meanings for polysemous entries).

As regards grammatical and semantic definers, we follow the lead of French lexicographers in labelling definers[5]. The grammatical definers are, accordingly, abbreviated as follows: n. for nouns, masc. for masculine, pl. for plural, v. for verb, adj. for adjective, etc. As for the semantic definers, they are indicated by the forms 'variety (of)', 'action of', 'fact of', etc. Some usage markers are also used. This is, most influentially, the case of neologisms which are indicated by the label neo. When only one of the meanings of the entry word is neological, that particular meaning is indicated by the label neo. This is the case of the entry ⴰⵎⵔⵏⵓ'pivot', whose acceptations comprise one neological meaning, namely 'adverb'. This meaning is not only indicated by a postposed usage marker (neo.), but also by a marker of the domain of usage which is grammar (gram.).

On many an opportunity, the reader will be exposed to idiomatic expressions or to special locutions or collocations. Whenever such display holds, the idiomatic expressions or locutions are preceded by a bullet point (◊) and are placed under the basic entries[6]. To describe a lexical item, two scenarios are observed. In the first, the lexical item of the source language, i.e. the Amazigh language, has a direct correspondent in the target language (English), in which case, the correspondent is readily provided. Other than that, the translation provided takes the form of a definition in the target language. The lexical item ⴰⴼⵓⵙ, for instance, has the word 'hand' as a corresponding English equivalent, while for an entry like ⴰⵖⵎⵉⵎⵥ, which does not have a word for word equivalent, it is defined in English as a 'mixture of ash and embers'. In certain idiomatic phrases,

5. A grammatical metalanguage indeed obtains in the Amazigh language, but, up to now, we do not have standard norms for abbreviations.

6. The units preposed by a bullet point (◊) which are ordered under the basic entry word are not taken into consideration in the counting of the global number of entries given above. If the units are included, the number will reach 14697 entries.

where the meaning of the phrase is not the sum of the meanings of each of the words from which it is composed, we provide the literal meaning (lit.) followed by the precise meaning of the whole phrase.

A dictionary is, by excellence, the means via which we get the meaning of words. In the dictionary at hand where the definition and the exemplification are not systematically provided, the meaning is provided by supplying the equivalent in the target language, namely English. An English index is provided at the end of the dictionary to help the reader find the Amazigh words. Each item in the index is followed by a number that refers the reader to the entry word.

The choice of Amazigh as a source language in this dictionary, both in its original form Dictionnaire général de la langue amazighe (amazighe-français-arabe) or in this English version (Amazigh-English), is ascribed to a whole range of reasons. Foremost among these reasons is the fact that the neology dynamism that the Amazigh language has known drives the authors to adopt a semasiological perspective where meaning follows the lexical entry. With the target language being English, this work is meant to be a continuation of the previous version of the dictionary where the correspondents of the Amazigh entries are provided in Arabic and French, in fine accord with the sociolinguistic situation in Morocco, where Arabic and Amazigh cohabit as official languages and French as the first foreign language. This English version is meant to widen the scope of access to Amazigh lexical material by targeting Amazigh or non-Amazigh users who master English to the exclusion of other languages.
